INTRODUCTORY.

Few words will suffice for what I have to say, beyond what I have said in the body of the Catalogue, of the Collection of Mr. William J. Jenks, and perhaps the most important thing that I can say is this:—

Mr. Jenks assures me, that in his whole collection but a single piece can be found of doubtful authenticity, and he guarantees the genuineness of each and every piece, with the single exception named—the exception I need hardly say is No. 791, and it is but right to add that No. 468 was not originally in the Jenks Collection; for the views regarding that piece, I am alone responsible. Mr. Jenks's standing as a numismatist is such as to render his assurance of the genuineness of the coins, formerly his property, important and almost conclusive.

Guided in important particulars by an excellent Catalogue, prepared by the former owner, and taking generally his view as to the condition of the coins, I trust I have not fallen into errors of description which will lead any purchaser astray, and without further remarks, I submit to the tender mercies of buyers what I deem by far the finest Collection of Ancient and Foreign coins that I have ever had the good fortune to offer for competition.

It is well known that a gold coin of Pescennius Niger was for a long time one of the treasures in the cabinet of the King of France, and that the coin was stolen many years ago, the general opinion being that it went to the crucible. The suggestion is presented of the possibility that such was not the fate of the piece in question, but that, saved from destruction, it here appears again. The owner of the piece is able to trace it in responsible hands for more than thirty years, which period carries us well back towards the time of the robbery alluded to. In brief, the story is this:—Mr. Connor was, for many years prior to 1870, an owner and manager of real estate in the city of Boston. About 1860 he had in some of his houses quite a colony of Italians. The rent falling due, one of his Italian tenants was unable to meet it, and placed in Mr. Connor's hands this coin as security, exacting a promise that it should be kept and returned to him, stating that he prized it highly because it was a gift to him from a nobleman whom he knew in Italy, and who had presented it to him a long time before he left his native country. Not being redeemed, the coin was retained by Mr. Connor until his death, which occurred a few years ago, when it was inherited by his son, who, having no appreciation of its value, though perfectly aware of its great rarity, pierced it and wore it for a watch charm till last year, when it was sold to me.

COMING SALES.

The thirty-fifth sale of my series will probably be the Collection of Dr. F. S. Hitchcock, of Omaha, Nebraska, consisting of Coins and curiosities, so varied in character as to render an enumeration difficult. Prominent features are the arms and domestic implements of some of the most savage of the Indian tribes. Stone implements, and other remains of pre-historic man. Pistols,—a large number,—some of most remarkable construction, and others of great historic interest; one formerly the property of the pirate Semmes, Japanese arms, and other curiosities.

Other sales will follow from time to time. One, the numismatic collection of Mr. William Clogston, of Springfield, Mass. Another, a celebrated American collection, the owner of which for the present prefers to remain "incog." Another, a Library, rich in Americana; and still another of Coins, Bric-a-brac, and Paintings, many by American artists of distinction. Other coin sales are arranged for, but are not sufficiently advanced to allow of a definite announcement.

Copies of this Catalogue, with two fine heliotype plates illustrating numerous coins, as may be seen by the list at the end, may be procured at 50 cents each, but as the number printed is only fifty, early orders are necessary to prevent disappointment. Thick paper copies, edition fifty in number, illustrated and priced, will be sent to order for $1.25 each.

Thick paper, illustrated copies of the Mercer Catalogue are now ready, price $1 each. Correspondents are respectfully requested to send their orders early, that I may have my order book ready as near as may be, before leaving for New York. Letters for me from January 8th to 14th, should be sent care of Messrs. Bangs & Co., New York City.
